Return to Work

Telework

Situation:
An employee asks to continue teleworking after her employer calls all employees back to the workplace after mandatory telework related to the pandemic. The employer tells the employee she will need to come into the office until the interactive process is complete.

Is this a good approach?

ADA

Employers do not have to provide an accommodation until the accommodation process is complete.

Best Practice
Allow the telework to continue during the interactive process, especially if the issue is pandemic-related.
Return to Work

Telework

Situation:
An employee who is teleworking asks his employer to purchase an ergonomic chair and wrist rest for his home office. The employer says it's the employee's responsibility to provide at-home equipment.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

ADA

EEOC has been unclear about what equipment employers must provide for employees with disabilities who telework as an accommodation under normal circumstances.

Best Practice
Provide work-related equipment unless undue hardship.

Return to Work

Telework – COVID

If an employee with a disability needs the same reasonable accommodation at a telework site that he had at the workplace, the employer should provide that accommodation, absent undue hardship.

From question 14 at: https://www.eeoc.gov/laws/guidance/pandemic-preparedness-workplace-and-americans-disabilities-act
Leave

Situation:
During the pandemic, an employee discloses that he is addicted to illegal drugs and wants to get help. He asks for leave time to go to rehab. The employer has a zero-tolerance policy for illegal drug use and terminates the employee under the policy.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

Leave

ADA
Current illegal drug users are not covered under the ADA, and employers can apply their usual policies.

Best Practice
Consider allowing leave and a last chance agreement.
Return to Work

Leave

Situation:
An employee asked for leave until the pandemic is over. The employer denies the request because there is no end date and notifies the employee that he is being terminated.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

ADA
Leave must be provided unless undue hardship, but indefinite leave might be considered inherently unreasonable.

Best Practice
Find out why the employee is asking for leave.
Talk to the employee about options for return to work.

Return to Work

Leave – COVID
The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) has not directly addressed whether a request for leave “until the pandemic is over” is considered a request for indefinite leave.

EEOC is encouraging employers and employees to be creative and flexible.
MENTAL HEALTH

Return to Work

Mental Health

Situation:
After returning to work during the pandemic, an employee with panic disorder requests a private office and not to have to interact with the public or coworkers because she fears catching COVID. The employer denies the request stating that sufficient safety precautions are in place.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

ADA

Employers get to choose among effective accommodations.

Best Practice

Discuss the situation with the employee. Try to address the employee’s concerns.
Return to Work

Mental Health

Situation:
An employee with anxiety asks to bring an emotional support animal to work. The employer denies the request because the employee did not need the accommodation before the pandemic.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

ADA

The duty to provide accommodations is ongoing; it does not matter that an employee did not always need the accommodation.

Best Practice

Treat pandemic-related requests the same as non-pandemic requests.

Return to Work

Mental Health – COVID

Although many people feel significant stress due to the COVID-19 pandemic, employees with certain preexisting mental health conditions, for example, anxiety disorder, obsessive-compulsive disorder, or PTSD, may have more difficulty handling the disruption to daily life that has accompanied the COVID-19 pandemic.

SERVICE ANIMALS

Return to Work

Service Animals

Situation:
An employee who is blind asks to telework because her service animal is not trained to social distance. The employer denies the request because it’s about the service animal’s limitations, not the employee’s limitations.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

ADA
Employers must consider accommodations related to an employee’s chosen method of overcoming limitations.

Best Practice
Treat the request as you would if it was a wheelchair user who cannot access the workplace.
Return to Work

Service Animals – COVID

CDC recommends handlers keep their service animals a safe distance away from other people and animals.

From https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/animals/service-therapy-animals.html

COMMUTING

Situation:
An employee with IBS asked to work temporarily at an office closer to her home to avoid using public restrooms. The employer denies the request, stating that employees are responsible for getting themselves to work.

Is this a good approach?
Return to Work

ADA
Employers do not have to provide transportation to and from work but might have to consider other accommodations related to commuting problems such as modified schedule and telework.

Best Practice
Treat the request as an accommodation request and consider modifying the employee’s schedule.

Return to Work

Commuting – COVID
Employees who rely on public transportation may have difficulty safely commuting to work.

Temporary telework may be a viable solution.

JOB RESTRUCTURING
Return to Work

Job Restructuring

Situation:
During the pandemic, a nurse was excused from seeing COVID-19 patients, but the employer asked her to start seeing them again after the number of patients rose. The nurse refused so the employer fired her.

Is this a good approach?

Return to Work

ADA

Employers do not have to excuse an employee from performing essential job functions as an accommodation.

Best Practice

Go through the accommodation process, explore other options.

Return to Work

Job Restructuring – COVID

The fact that an employer temporarily excused performance of one or more essential functions does not mean that the employer permanently changed a job’s essential functions.

Situation:
An employee with diabetes has been teleworking for months during the pandemic. The employer wants to review the accommodation and asks the employee for medical documentation.

Is this a good approach?

ADA
Employers can require medical documentation when the disability and need for accommodation are not obvious or already documented.

Best Practice
Don’t ask for new medical documentation unless necessary.
Return to Work

Medical Documentation – COVID

Consider using CDC guidance related to at risk employees and minimize the need for medical documentation.

VACCINES

Return to Work

Vaccines

Situation:
As vaccines are becoming more widely available, an employer wants to require at risk employees to return to the office instead of teleworking.

Is this a good approach?
Return to Work

ADA
Emploees only have to provide accommodations if they continue to be needed.

Best Practice
Don’t assume that vaccine availability negates the need to telework, use a case-by-case approach.

Return to Work

Vaccines – COVID
If an employee cannot get vaccinated for COVID-19 because of a disability and there is no reasonable accommodation possible, then it would be lawful for the employer to exclude the employee from the workplace. This does not mean the employer may automatically terminate the worker.

EMPLOYEES WITH COVID-19
Employees with COVID-19

Situation:
An employee returning to work after having COVID-19 asked for periodic rest breaks to help her deal with ongoing fatigue. The employer denied the request after determining that COVID-19 is not a disability.

Is this a good approach?

ADA
Employers only have to accommodate employees with current disabilities or a record of a disability.

Best Practice
Err on the side of caution. Consider providing accommodations when possible.

Return to Work

Employees with COVID-19

This is a very new virus, and while medical experts are learning more about it, there is still much that is unknown. Therefore, it is unclear at this time whether COVID-19 is or could be a disability under the ADA.

COVID-Related Accommodations

COVID-Related Accommodation Examples

Accommodations

Example
An accountant who is deaf usually reads lips to communicate. During the COVID-19 pandemic, all employees were required to wear cloth face coverings as an infection control measure.

Accommodations

ACCOMMODATION:
The employee could read lips if others wore clear face masks. The employer was willing to provide the masks for the coworkers the accountant frequently interacted with.
Accommodations

Example
Roger, an employee with heightened sensory sensitivities is returning to work after being home due to the pandemic. His employer is requiring all employees to wear masks the employer provides. Roger has difficulty with stress and anxiety while wearing the rough and scratchy mask for the full day, so he asked if he could provide his own cloth mask.

ACCOMMODATION:
After some discussion about how to sanitize the mask every evening for the next day, Roger’s employer allowed him to wear his own mask while they evaluated its effectiveness.

Example
A daycare worker took an immunosuppressant due to a kidney transplant. She had concerns about working around children and not being able to practice social distancing during the COVID-19 pandemic. She asked her employer to allow her to work a night shift so she could limit exposure from families, children, and coworkers.
Accommodations

ACCOMMODATION:
The essential function of her position, caring for children, requires that she work during the day because that is when the daycare primarily operates. Since the employer cannot modify her hours, the employer temporarily reassigned her to a different position.

Accommodations

Example
A help desk employee’s main job functions included troubleshooting the problems of other staff members. He was highly competent in solving problems but was now experiencing panic attacks due to fear of COVID-19 exposure.

Accommodations

ACCOMMODATION:
A new policy was instituted that allowed the employee to take requests for help by e-mail or by phone instead of in person, reducing the employee’s fear and stress caused by close interactions with coworkers. This enabled him to feel safe while continuing to perform his job.
